Hello everyone, my name is Robert Beers. I am a transfer student seeking a double major in History and Anthropology. I decided on this major because of my love of history and fascination with how the human race has evolved and lived. I am from South Carolina but am cuntly in Ohio until April. I am currently Unemployed due to an injury I received on New Year's Day, slipping down the steps and dislocating my knee. I have still not been released to return to work and have been told that I will not be able to do the labor jobs I used to do. I am married and have a son and a daughter on the way, expected due date of March 17. I decided to finish my degree because of the injury and because I am tired of living paycheck to paycheck. The Social Science program could be beneficial to everyone. I say this because it would help the general population to understand how people have lived and what could have caused a downfall. History fields are particularly important because they can show you what happened to ancient civilizations that caused their downfall and collapse. Learning about how people lived and studying them can prevent history from repeating y from repeating itself the Roman Empire once the greatest in the world, destroyed itself by greed, I see that happing in the United States today. Now greed was not the only thing that caused the collapse, but it played a huge role. The way that the United States could fix the problem is to remove itself from corporate America and focus on the citizens, this will not happen unless the government is punished with bribes and corporate donations banned along with a fair taxing system that everyone pays their fair share of taxes.
